BAY PARTY FOR MISS ASCHAFFENBERG.

A bay party to the life saving station was given Sunday afternoon by the young men in honor of Mrs. Dannheisser's charming guest, Miss Lula Aschaffenberg of New Orleans. They left the city at 4 o'clock and returned at 10.

Those composing the party were the honoree Miss Aschaffenberg, Miss Rosa Levy, Miss Rosalie Jacoby, Miss Alice Levy, Miss Teresa Stone, Mr. Herman Berlin, Mr. Herman Greenwood, Mr. Frank Levy, Mr. Rudolph Flashner, Mr. Sam Lightman, Mr. Sam Kahn, Mr. Dave Gundersheimer, Mr. Gus Gundersheimer, Mr. Morris Levy.

MRS. C. J. HEINBERG'S BIRTHDAY EUCHRE.

Mrs. Bertha Heinberg entertained a few of her lady friends Sunday evening to informally celebrate her birthday. Euchre was enjoyed and the most delightful ice cream was served molded in lilies, roses, and other flowers, accompanied by cakes, peaches and other fruits.

Mrs. Morris Dannheisser won the first prize a match stand and Miss Hattie Hirschman the second a silver hat pin.

Mrs. Heinberg was the recipient of many good wishes for her continued good health and prosperity, and after the game the ladies playing presented her with a cut glass water set, a bottle and a dozen glasses.

BEING CHARMINGLY ENTERTAINED IN ALABAMA.

Mrs. Elwood de la Rue and Miss Kate Caro who are visiting Mrs. Cross at Letohatchie, Ala., are being delightfully feted.

One of the most beautiful functions in their honor according to the accounts was a dance given Tuesday night by their hostess at her beautiful plantation residence, for which the decorations were very attractive, immense quantities of roses being used.

The reception hall was radiant in yellow and white roses, the parlor in cream and white, and the dining room in white roses, pink carnations and ferns, the pink and white being carried out in the lilies and creams.

Miss Cross, charming young daughter of the hostess in a girlish touch of pink and white was assisted by Miss Eva Hooks in pink, in serving the ice creams.

Mrs. Cross was handsomely gowned, as were Mrs. de la Rue and Miss Caro, in cool, sheer white.

MR. AND MRS. HIRSCHMAN'S FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Hirschman celebrated the fortieth anniversary of their marriage Saturday night by entertaining a number of their friends.

Music, games and refreshments were the chief entertainments, participated in by all with great enjoyment.

The decorations were in pink and white and the colors were carried out in the cake and cream, a two course luncheon, salads and sweets, being served.

Lotto was enjoyed by many and three beautiful prizes were given. Mrs. Morris Dannheisser winning the first, a cake plate; Mrs. Jake Israel the booby, an olive dish; and Miss Aschaffenberg of New Orleans the guest prize, a pin tray.

Mrs. Hirschman was gracefully assisted by her daughter Miss Hattie in entertaining guests and at the close of the game the Lotto players presented her with a set of sterling silver spoons. Mr. and Mrs. Hirschman were also the recipients of numerous other tokens of love and esteem.

Those playing Lotto were Mrs. Sydney Kahn, Mrs. Morris Dannheisser, Mr. and Mrs. Max Heinberg, Mrs. Ike Hilborn, Mrs. Bertha Heinberg, Mrs. Jake Israel, Mrs. Julius Menko, Mrs. Guggenheim, Miss Aschaffenberg (New Orleans), Mrs. H. P. Newman, Mr. and Mrs. Ike Hirschman, Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Hirschman.

A FABLE.

There once lived a girl who was a great theorist. She had theories on housekeeping, diet, education, dress and love, which she took great delight in expounding to her family and friends.

Now, it so happened that, during a sojourn in a distant city, she met a very nice young man who became enamored of her and whose affection she was inclined to return. But as she had a pet theory concerning engagements, she withheld a definite answer to his entreaties that she become his wife, and said:

"Although I love you, I cannot answer you in the affirmative until your affection for me has undergone a test. From what you have told me of yourself, you have associated but little with girls. How, then, can you be sure that your love for me will endure. Therefore leave me for one month, during which time no communication shall pass between us; associate with other girls as much as possible, and if at the end of that time your heart is still true to me I shall become yours for all time."

The young man protested and pleaded with all the ardor of love, but the theorist remained firm in her decision. Finally the lover bade her a reluctant adieu, and was off to keep the compact.

The weeks went by and the end of the month came. The theorist, who by this time, it must be confessed, had become exceedingly homesick for the nice young man, attired herself in her most becoming frock and awaited with fluttering heart his coming.

A bounding step was heard on the porch. The theorist sprang to the door. A messenger-boy handed her a telegram. It read:

Test successful. Am engaged. Girl said yes at once. Has no theories. Moral—A bird in hand often flies out of the window.—Blanche Goodman, in September Smart Set.

The Journal's Daily Fashion Feature

CHARMING DESIGN FOR PROMENADE COSTUME.

For linen, mohair, any of the lighter cloths, such as Henrietta, or for taffetas this design is bound to reproduce well. The coat is one of the loose box Etons that stand well out from the figure, and a vest effect is introduced in the front under a fold of the coat. A knotted cravat seems to hold the coat together at the neck, catching the embroidered turndown collar. Both fronts are heavily embroidered in raised blind work. The sleeve is a short full puff, knitted out at the shoulder, and ending above the elbow. The skirt is fitted with yoke effect over the hips, slashed at intervals to admit panels of side-pleating, and finished with a plain stitched hem at the foot. The corselet girdle in black satin is a separate affair, built upon one of those feather-boned frames, lacing invisibly in front and finished with a short "bobby" sash in the back.

GONZALEZ

Special to The Journal.
Gonzalez, Aug. 14.—Our little town never was any more healthy than now. Mr. Jas. A. Holman is still in bad health, having been confined to his bed and room now for over two months.

Mrs. Mollie Wakeford, an old and prominent resident of Baldwin county, Alabama, but for the past fifteen years a resident of Adel, Ga., accompanied by her two smallest children, has just returned home from a two weeks visit with her brother and family, Mr. Jas. Holman, of this place. Fifteen years having passed away since brother and sister had met.

Mrs. Albert Lowell has just returned from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Allan, of Robinson Point.

Quite an enjoyable affair occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brown Friday evening, it being the fifteenth birthday of their young daughter, Miss Nevada. A large crowd of her young friends gathered, some coming from your city. Many amusing games were indulged in and just as the 11:35 train arrived at Gonzalez the crowd began bidding their fair little hostess goodnight, and many were the kind expressions tendered that this fair young rose bud would live to entertain her friends with many other happy occasions.

We are having copious showers now and as dog days are on us, I have heard an old adage that if it rains on the first dog day it will rain on them all. Verily, it looks as though this might prove true.

Sweet potatoes and grass are growing fine. Farmers that have been strenuous have been blessed with splendid crops and the coming harvest will be all that heart could wish.

STEGOMYIA FURNISHES POETIC INSPIRATION.

The following "pome" has been handed The Journal as an evidence of the extent to which even Mistress Stegomyia Fasciata can inspire the poetic mind to verse. It is entitled: In the Gloaming.
In the gloaming, oh my darling, cover up your hands and face,
For 'tis then the "Stegomyia Skeeter" flies and bites you every place.
It is best to screen your windows, pour the oil on stagnant pools;
Then should you get it, oh my darling, doctor can't call you a fool.

In the twilight, oh my darling, when the night is falling fast,
Tuck your bar, and tuck it tightly, for the skeeter might trespass.
In the morning kill all skeeters that have pestered you by night,
Beg, oh beg, "Madam Stegomyia," kindly spare you from her bite.
